Enlargest and the chespest illustrated paper in the world; price only two cents.—New before, in the history of newspapers in New York, has there been presented to the public angle a great variety of matter as is contained in the Wide Awake of this week, at the low price of two cents. The editor says:—We have determined to increase the dimensions of the Wide Awake, and make it the largest, the chespest, and the best two cent weekly paper in the world. This is no vain, empty, or kile boast. The appearance of this number, we flatter ourself, fully justifies the assertion we have made. Each issue will be provincely illustrated; and we hereby invite designers and engravers to furnish for our inspection such specimens of their skill as they deem suitable to a popular illustrated weedly. The proprietor of the Wide Awake is aware that it requires considerable capital to publish apaper of this class at so low a price, but he is prepared to make the expenditure, and to give to the public a paper they will appreciate and support. In the number we have commenced a new tale, which will be continued regularly from week to week in large and interesting parts. It is entitled "Fanny Trevanian, or the Abducted Daughter." A well-known critic having been favored with the rading of it, gives the following opinion:—"It is a brilliantly and powerfully written 1 cratice. The story seemed to be starting by jerks. There was a wiry edge to the style. But all this soon wore off. The mind of the writer limbered out and mellowed as it went along. There began to be the ring of the true metal, and be thrulled by it. Price only two cents. For sake by all news agreats. The irade supplied by Ross, Jones & Tousey, Albe & Yaste, Dexter & Brother, and Dewitt & Lavenport, at the lowest rates.
